Booty Calls

WHEN THE LOOT DROPS, DON'T LET THE SPOILS OF WAR SPOIL THE PARTY.

The raid is over! The boss finally falls, the delicious loot appears, and... you're not sure what to do next. Greed and confusion wash over you in equal measure. Is that yours? Is that someone else's? Do I deserve that more than the other people, or does my self?

Effective loot management is one of the biggest challenges for any raiding guild. There's rarely going to be just one player who wants a particular piece of loot, so how do you ensure that everyone feels that they have a fair chance to win — and that peoples' efforts are recognized and rewarded? Over the years, many different systems and approaches to loot management have evolved, some are strictly regimented, whereas others are very casual. We talk to a variety of raiders about what works best for them, so you can figure out which one might work for you.